Active student participation in class discussions and activities

2.1 EVALUATION, REFLECTION AFTER TRAINING

5

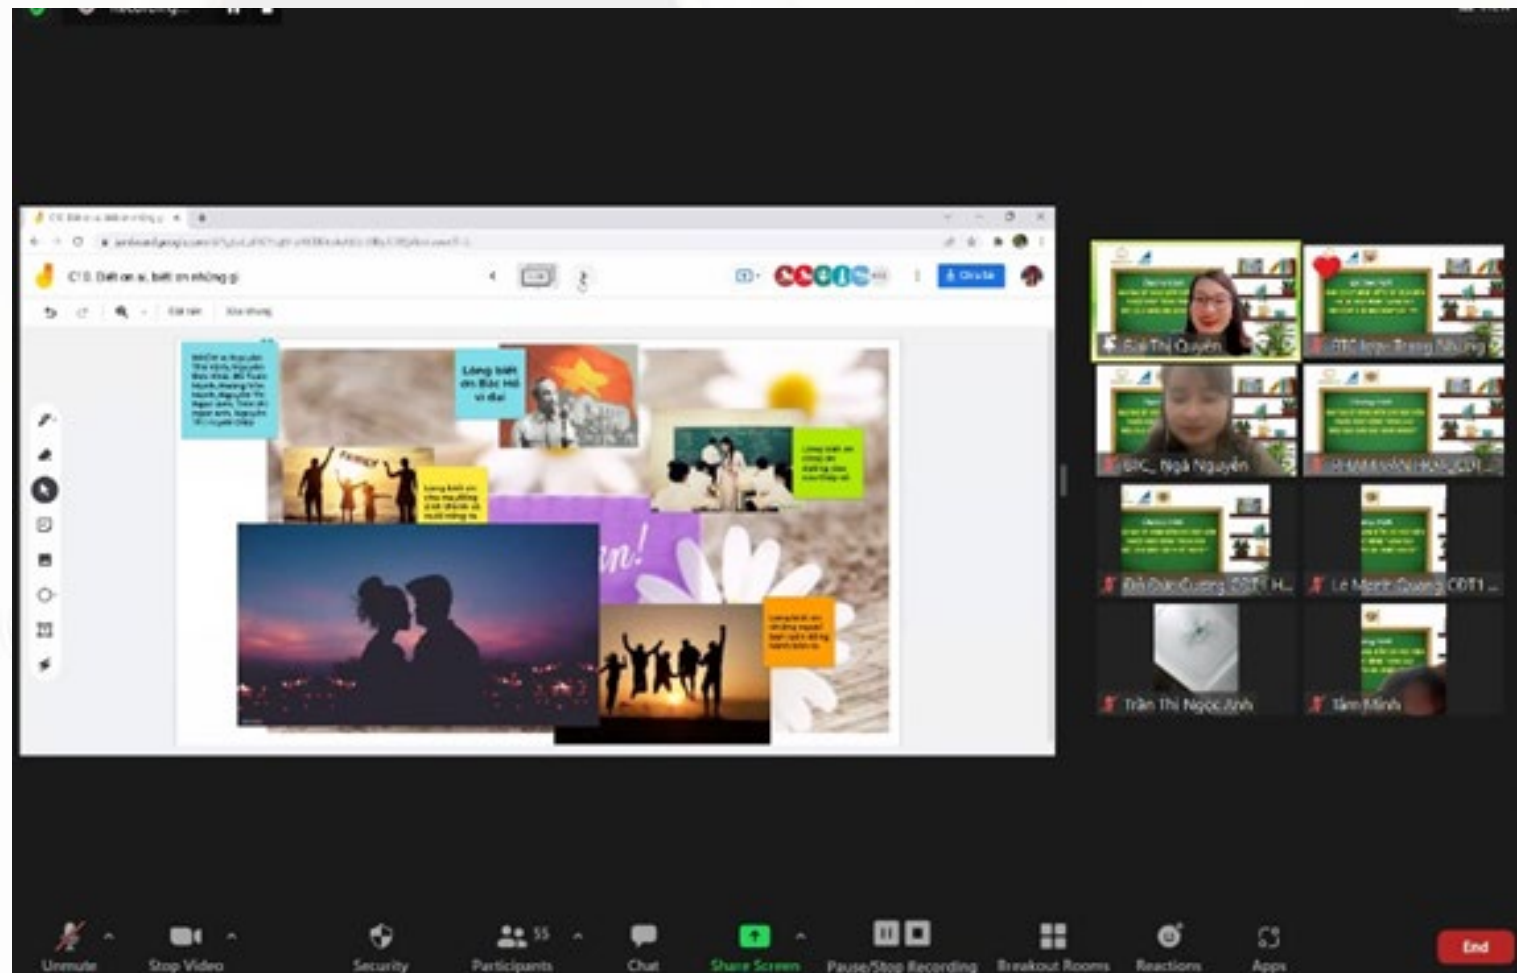

Students are highly enthusiastic about learning and perceive growth through each session: they exhibit more polished behavior, live responsibly, and become more proactive in their tasks. Many, who were initially shy and introverted, have actively participated, spoken up, and shared with the instructors during class, consequently becoming more confident in communication. Students have developed clearer direction and goals after completing the program.

Students have proposed and shown more enthusiasm for the direct teaching format (offline) of the program compared to the indirect learning format (online). This preference arises from the desire for direct skills training, more interaction within groups and pairs, and increased engagement with both fellow learners and experts.

The assignment and skills training methods employed in each session, combining various highly applicable teaching approaches, have received support and active participation from the students.

Students actively participate with their cameras on, expressing fondness for the lecturer and the program.

PART 03

THE LANDSCAPE OF LABOR IN VIETNAM AND PROPOSED RECOMMENDATIONS TO ENHANCE VOCATIONAL EDUCATION EFFECTIVENESS

3.1 QUALITY OF VIETNAM'S HUMAN RESOURCES

Vietnam's Labor Force

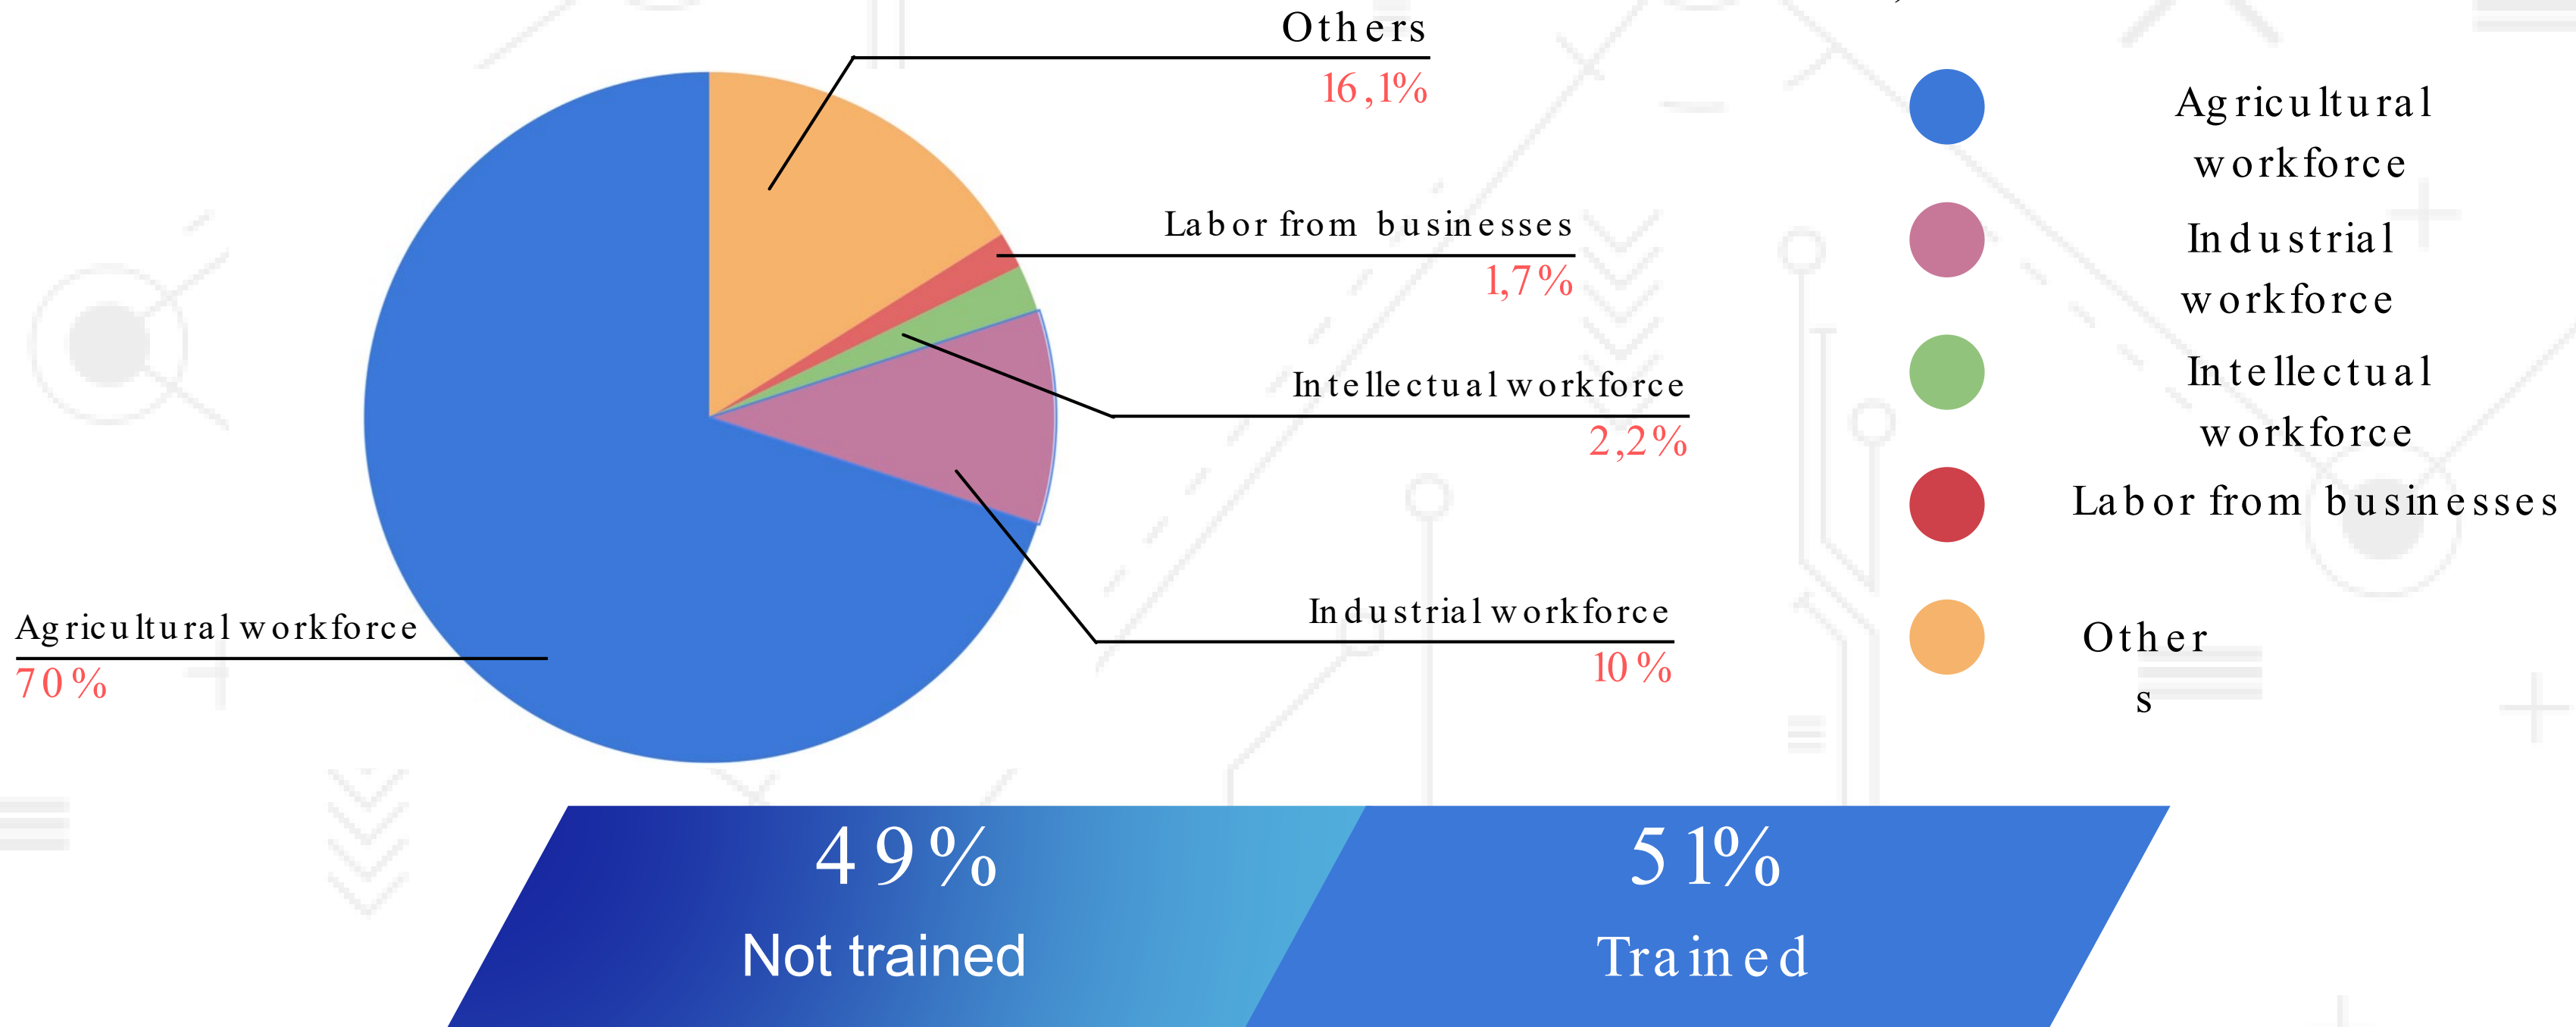

90,7
million people

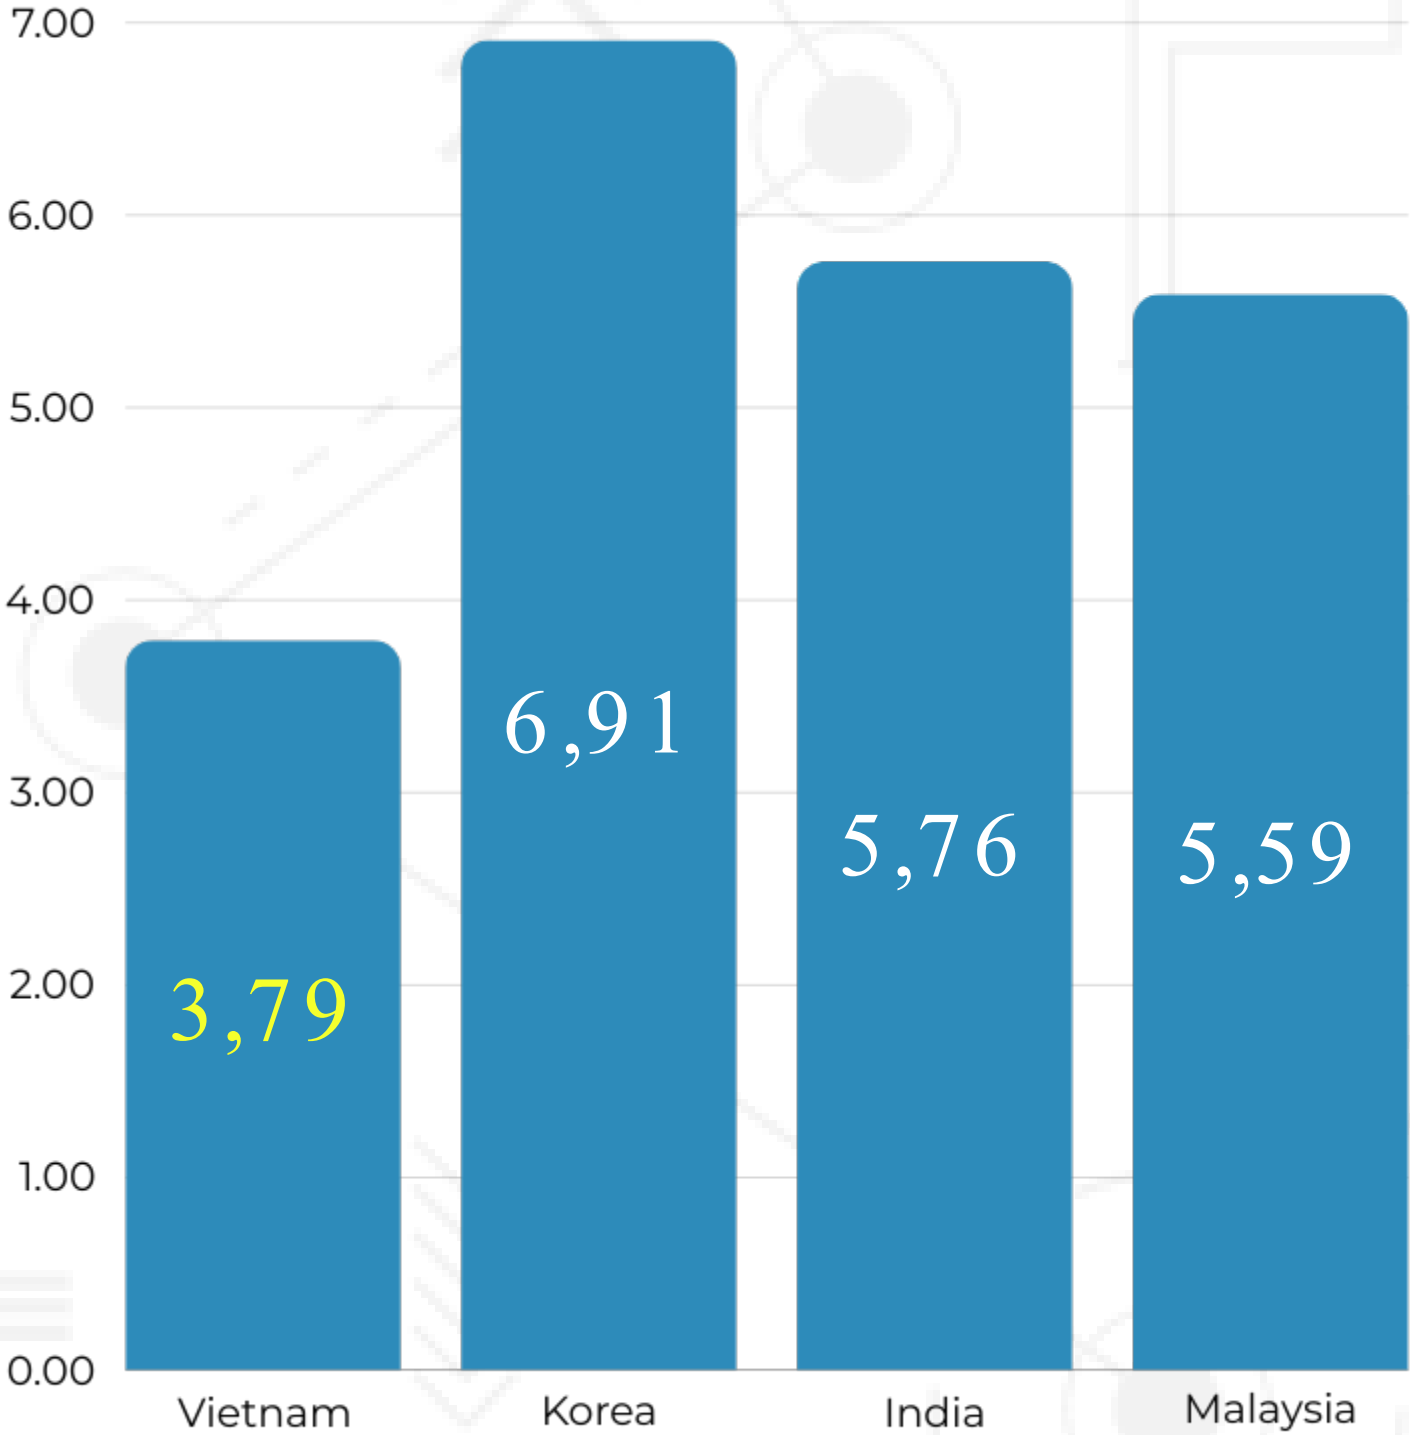

54,4
million labor

The labor force includes people aged 15 and over who are employed and unemployed during the reference period (7 days before the observation time).

Vietnam's labor quality ranks 11th out of 12 Asian countries participating in the ranking, following Malaysia, India, South Korea.

Labor productivity of Vietnamese workers is the lowest in the Asia-Pacific region.

3.2 VIETNAM'S HIGH-QUALITY LABOR RATIO REMAINS LOW

The quality of the workforce meeting the requirements of the international market and integration remains a challenge for Vietnam. In reality, Vietnam's ratio of high-quality labor is currently low compared to the general correlation in the region and worldwide.

In the World Economic Forum's 2019 Global Competitiveness Report, under pillar 6 on labor, Vietnam's labor skills ranked 93rd out of 140 assessed economies.

3.3 GENERAL OVERVIEW OF THE LABOR LANDSCAPE IN VIETNAM

In 2019, a survey conducted among businesses in Vietnam revealed that many of them faced difficulties in recruiting high-quality labor. 73% of businesses reported difficulties in recruiting employees for managerial positions, and 61% struggled to find labor with suitable skills. These figures indicate a significant gap between the supply and demand for labor in Vietnam.

Here are some notable numbers:

73%

of businesses reported difficulties in recruiting employees for managerial positions

61%

Businesses struggled to find labor with suitable skills

- The 2020 Vietnam Employment Survey shows that simple jobs are decreasing, and employment in the new era requires more advanced and specialized skills.
- A 2012 study by the Thailand Development Research Institute (TDRI) indicated that most of the soft skills of Vietnamese workers were at an average or weak level, especially in teamwork and leadership skills.

3.3 GENERAL OVERVIEW OF THE Labor Landscape in Vietnam

In addition, VCCI Chairman Pham Tan Cong provided the following figures: When businesses have plans for replacement or expansion, the labor group that businesses can easily recruit the most is ordinary workers (62%). Next are the accounting group (42%), technical staff (25%), and management and supervision (20%). The most challenging labor group to recruit is the executive director group (15%).

In reality, Vietnam is still in the "golden" demographic period, but the quality of the labor force is not yet "golden." The proportion of labor with degrees or certificates is only 26.1%, and the majority of the labor force has limited skills, low income, and does not meet the requirements of employers and the market. Changing the skills of the labor force depends on training, but the changes in regular training programs at vocational education institutions are often lagging behind the needs of the labor market.
